General Description

Pumice in its powdered or dust form is a volcanic rock that consists of highly vesicular rough textured volcanic glass, which may or may not contain crystals. It is typically light coloured. Pumice is created when super-heated, highly pressurized rock is violently ejected from a volcano. The unusual foamy configuration of pumice happens because of simultaneous rapid cooling and rapid depressurization. The depressurization creates bubbles by lowering the solubility of gases (including water and CO₂) that are dissolved in the lava, causing the gases to rapidly exsolve (like the bubbles of CO₂ that appear when a carbonated drink is opened). The simultaneous cooling and depressurization freezes the bubbles in a matrix.

Extraction

Pumice is a substance of volcanic origin consisting chiefly of complex silicates of aluminium and alkali metals.
